

USC ANNENBERG CENTER
SPEAKER SERIES

Thursday, December 7, 2006

“Network Governance and the Internet in the UK”

RICHARD COLLINS
Open University UK

“When News Was New”

TERHI RANTANEN
London School of Economics

Select streaming media format:

Windows Media

QuickTime

MP3 (Audio)

Introduced by

Professor Jonathan Aronson
Executive Director, USC Annenberg Center

Biographies

Richard Collins is a Professor of Media Studies at the Open University UK, where he is a member of the ESRC-funded Centre for Research on Socio-Cultural Change (CRESC) research center, and Vodacom visiting Professor at the LINK Centre, Graduate School of Public and Development Management, University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg, South Africa.

Collins received his B.A. with honors in English Literature from the University of York, M.A. in English from the University of Warwick, Ph.D. from the University of Strathclyde, and his D.Sc. (Economics) from the University of London.

Terhi Rantanen specializes in global media. Her main objects of interest include news agencies and the first electronic media in the 19th century, the relationship between the global and the national, post-communist media, the role of media and communications in globalization, and most currently, the wider social implications of news.

Rantanen is currently Reader in Media and Communications and Director of the MSc program in Global Media and Communications with the Media and Communications department at the London School of Economics. She is also a Docent in the Department of Communication at Helsinki University and founding editor of a new journal entitled Global Media and Communication and a contributing editor to Journalism-Theory, Practice and Critics.